New Mexico Military Institute's Col. J.R. Kelly Archives

101 W. College Blvd., Roswell, NM 88201

575-624-8370

archives@nmmi.edu

<https://www.nmmi.edu/archives/>

The mission of the New Mexico Military Institute J.R. Kelly Archives (NMMI) is to identify, collect, preserve and make available records of permanent historical or administrative value. The J.R. Kelly Archives supports the research and institutional needs of NMMI and serves as an institutional memory of the school. The purpose of collecting such records is to provide documentation of the history, development, and administration of the New Mexico Military Institute. Records that have been digitized for these purposes have been created from historical master copies which may contain opinions, attitudes, perspectives, language, beliefs, images, or other content that the modern reader may find offensive. These primary sources should be considered records which reflect the sensibilities and capabilities of the creators in the historical era in which they were produced. The J.R. Kelly Archives presents these documents as part of the historical record and does not endorse the attitudes expressed therein. Furthermore, the Archives will not alter historical records to suit contemporary needs. The Archives is administered by the Archival Librarian of the Paul Horgan Library.
